Rhododendron Price List for 1953-54

Read the Following Information:

We propagate Rhododendrons from cuttings, rooted first in sand, then transplanted in the peat moss and very little of sifted soil, to insure normal root structure growth, with all chemical elements present. The cuttings grow on in the greenhouse benches and the plants are transplanted outdoors in the lath houses in the mixture of about half peat moss and half fine soil. This method is best guarantee against the set back or losses of the plants; this happens when plants are grown in sawdust and "artificial" chemicals. We propagate also by grafting indicated in list by (gr).

We have nine acres of ideal soil along Johnson Creek located 11 miles from the city center, 2 miles from the city limit. Nickolas Radovich is a graduate of Oregon state college; has been experimenting with these plants for 23 years. We produce 24,000 annually; also large stock of budded plants of various sizes.
